Economist and data analyst. Three years applying Python, SQL, and Power BI inside real finance roles — treasury, billing, and FP&A — for operations across 15+ countries in the Americas. My edge isn't only technical: I understand the business the data describes. Master's in Economics in progress (Pontificia Universidad Javeriana). Seeking a fully remote role as Data Analyst / Junior Data Scientist.

THE TRANSITION

In every finance role, I ended up building the same thing: code and data. An FX analysis in Python as an intern. Automations that freed more than 10 hours a month in treasury. Dashboards that turned accounting closes into decisions. In 2024 I won a data analytics hackathon and completed Stanford's Machine Learning Specialization. The conclusion was obvious: I wasn't doing finance with a bit of data — I was doing data science inside finance. This site documents the final step: making it my main career, without discarding the advantage of understanding the business.
